How to Explore Entrepreneurship & Workforce After High School

2

Explore Job Options or Business Ideas

Look into entry-level jobs or small business ideas that match your skills and interests. Use sites like Indeed, YouTube, or TikTok to see what others are doing after high school.

5

Find Funding or Work Opportunities

Search for jobs online, ask around locally, or look into funding options like youth grants or savings. Don't be afraid to start small and grow over time.

1

Discover Your Strengths & Interests

Do you enjoy solving problems or being your own boss? Think about what you're good at and what types of jobs or businesses excite you. Whether it's graphic design, retail, or tech, understanding your passions is the first step.

3

Build Your Skills

Whether you're entering the workforce or launching a business, learn basic skills like communication, budgeting, time management, and digital tools. You can take free or low-cost courses online or gain experience through part-time work, internships, or volunteering.

4

Create a Resume or Business Plan

Make a simple resume if you're job hunting, or write a basic business plan if you're launching a business. Keep it clear, focused, and realistic.

6

Launch & Grow

Once you're working or running your business, focus on learning, setting goals, and being reliable. Growth comes with effort and consistency.
